BS Health, Fitness, and Recreation Resources '14

Chief Development Officer, Speaking With Impact

Nia Maureen Harrington is a proud alumna of George Mason University, where she earned her bachelor of science in health, fitness, and recreation resources with a concentration in sport management in 2014. She currently serves as the chief development officer at Speaking With Impact, leading initiatives in communication, leadership development, and media coaching. With more than seven years of experience in client relations, sales, and sales support, Harrington has collaborated with top organizations such as Under Armour, the Washington Commanders, the University of Maryland Athletics, and the Washington Wizards. Through her efforts, she has built strong relationships and driven business growth.

At Speaking With Impact, Harrington has played a key role in the company's success, especially during the pandemic, by helping to adapt training programs for virtual and onsite delivery. Her leadership has contributed to year-over-year profit growth and long-term client partnerships that sustain the company.

Harrington is also committed to education and mentorship. She serves on the College of Education and Human Development Alumni Chapter Board and teaches a seminar on communication and interview strategies in the Sport Management Program, preparing the next generation of leaders. Harrington previously served as treasurer for Black Sports Professionals and is currently a mentor at the Washington Nationals Youth Baseball Academy, fostering personal and professional development.

Harrington's industry recognition includes receiving the 2024 Distinguished Alumni Award from George Mason University and being featured in the September 2024 issue of DC Modern Luxury magazine as part of their Dynamic Women series. The Washington Business Journal has also highlighted her work in communication and leadership.

With a passion for enhancing communication skills and executive presence, Harrington is dedicated to helping individuals, organizations, and her community thrive.
